Environmentalists Hint At Suits Over DOI Plans For Major Solar Expansion

Environmentalists are formally protesting the Department of Interior's (DOI) plan for major development of solar power projects on millions of acres of land in six western states, which sources say hints at possible future lawsuits over the plan for failing to comply with the National Environmental Policy Act (NEPA) and other federal laws. Suit Over 'Step 3' GHG Permit Rule On Hold Pending Related Ruling Appeal

The U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia Circuit has agreed to put on hold industry's suit over EPA's "step 3" of its greenhouse gas (GHG) permit rule until the court decides whether to hear a related industry appeal of a recent ruling that broadly upheld EPA's GHG regulatory program, including the first step of the permit rule. Livestock Industry Eyes USDA Data To Justify 'Harm' For EPA RFS Waiver

Livestock industry groups are looking to recent and upcoming U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) data on meat and corn prices to bolster their claims of "economic harm" they say warrants EPA granting their request for a waiver of the renewable fuel standard (RFS), which industry says is driving up costs for the sector. Romney Vow To Revoke EPA Vehicle GHG Regulation Faces Major Hurdles

GOP presidential candidate Mitt Romney's vow to scrap EPA's vehicle greenhouse gas (GHG) rule for model year 2017-2025 vehicles if he wins the November election faces major hurdles, sources say, including difficulty undoing the "strong" record justifying the rule, a divided Congress unlikely to overturn it and broad support for the rule. full story
